

HERRMANN WILL BUY OUT RED DIRECTORS

Ready to Purchase Stock Now Owned by His Trouble-Making Baseball Partners.

BACKED BY BIG MAGNATES

Ruggert, Dodgers' New Outfielder, Leads American Association in Long Drives.

Garry Herrmann will own a controlling interest in the Cincinnati club before the season of 1914 opens. This interesting move to the Sun yesterday from one of the biggest men in organized baseball, who is one of Herrmann's closest friends and supporters. The row between Herrmann and the Cincinnati club directors over the sale of Joe Tinker to Brooklyn will result in a complete reorganization of the Reds' ownership, it is said. Herrmann is the largest individual stockholder, but a combination of the shares owned by the Fleischmanns, Julius and Max, and by several others has tied the club president's hands.

Herrmann is extremely popular with the presidents and owners of National and American League clubs, who are up in arms because of the humiliating position in which he has been placed by the Fleischmann combination. Within the last week Garry has been urged to buy out the opposition.

It was rumored the other day that Jefferson Livingston wanted to purchase the Fleischmann interests in the Reds, but this was vigorously denied by their stockholders. However, it is said to be discredited with the present turmoil in the club, and will consider an offer from Herrmann. The National League as a body is urging Garry to get control of the Reds, so that the league can control the Cincinnati club. It is pointed out that loss of prestige as president of the Reds will weaken the power of the supreme court of baseball.

If Herrmann had been absolute in authority in former years, baseball then say, the Cincinnati team would have been much more successful. But the developments in the Tinker deal have disclosed the real causes of the Reds' poor showing year to year. In this connection, a story of the inside workings of the club is now in circulation.

It appears that Max Fleischmann had a run in with Tinker last summer that was the cause of trouble. Fleischmann wanted to run a summer ball team in the Adirondacks. He paid all expenses, hired professionals who masqueraded under assumed names and played center field himself. He became convinced in the time that he knew how a major league team should be conducted and soon he was busy inspecting the affairs of the Reds. One day last August Fleischmann, after a Red defeat, went into the dressing room and is said to have scolded Tinker for keeping a pitcher in the box too long. Tinker, a hot-headed young man, resented this criticism by ordering Fleischmann to leave the clubhouse. He refused to do so, and changed and Fleischmann went away having vowed vengeance.

Herrmann, so the story goes, took Tinker and all of the controversy and then it was decided to give one share of stock to Harry Stephens, so that he could be elected secretary, with power to supervise Herrmann's official acts. Herrmann did not favor the removal of Tinker from the management of the Reds, and he argued so well that for a time it looked as if Tinker would remain in charge. But Stephens, probably acting under orders, opened the breach with Tinker and when after three or four days the Reds' club secretary it was beyond Herrmann's power to retain the former manager of the team.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, was called to the Boston Red Sox because of mismanagement. President Tener of the National League, it is reported, favors a reorganization of the Cincinnati club, for similar reasons, and when the proper time comes he probably will induce Herrmann's desire to obtain control of the stock.

Outfielder Ruggert of St. Paul, who is now the property of the Brooklyn club, was the leading slugger in the American Association last season, according to the official batting averages. While Ruggert's batting average was only .293, he led in extra base hits, making nineteen, two baggers, twenty-three triples and twelve home runs. He took part in 145 games, scored ninety-five runs, lined out 179 hits and stole twenty-four bases. Chappell, for whom the White Sox paid $15,000, was the actual leader in percentage, with .349 in eighty-five games. Niehoff, the Louisville third baseman, who was traded by Cincinnati, led in stolen bases, with forty-eight, and had a batting average of .296. Gilbert of Milwaukee, traded by the Boston Nationals, batted .332. Bill Stump of Toledo, who started the season with Frank Chance, had an average of .292 in eighty-eight games.

Chance, who is wintering at Glendora, Cal., announced the other day that he had planned to leave Los Angeles for Hot Springs, Ark., on or about February 1. He will notify Caldwell, Fisher, Schulz, Ford, Keating, McHale and King before he leaves. He will be a fixture in a thorough batting out on March 1. The party will arrive in Houston, Tex., to join the other New York players. Chance, according to an interview, is much pleased at the engagement of the new outfielders, Jimmy Walsh and Lester Chandler. He says they will strengthen the team in batting and base running. Chance declares that he intends to make several new deals with the idea of bolstering the infield and the catching department. He says that Malcom, Peckinbaugh and Zoller are sure of regular field positions and that Gilhooley, in London, will be a fixture in right field. The P. L. has taken on 1914 players and says he never enjoyed better health.

Manager Stallings of the Boston Braves has secured $5,000 for the release of Third Baseman Al Dolan from the Cardinals. Stallings tried all last season to buy Dolan from the Philadelphia Nationals. When that player was traded to the Braves, Stallings predicted that he would be a fixture in the lineup. He spoke for the Cardinals as believing that he was the only manager who knows how to handle Dolan, and his offer to the Cardinals therefore is not a surprise. If Stallings declines to let Dolan go to Boston, Stallings will play Deal, secured from Providence in the draft, on third base. Deal was with the Detroit early last season, but he could not do himself much good because he was ill. He was released in the International League. Stallings has decided to play Schmidt first base with Sweeney on second and Marvins on short. With either Dolan or Deal on third he says the Braves will have one of the best infields in the major leagues.
